Abstract

A method of optimizing a computer program includes generating annotation information about the computer program, storing the annotation information with the computer program, and dynamically optimizing the computer program based on the annotation information while the computer program is being executed.